Assessing the Approaching 2014 Midterm Elections

As midterm elections begin to heat up, it is worth taking a moment to look at how the coming changes will impact the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs.

everal committee members are up for re-election on Nov. 4, including Democrats Mark Warner (Va.) and Jeff Merkley (Ore.). Others, including Republicans Tom Coburn (Okla.) and Mike Johanns (Neb.), have announced their intent to retire at the end of the year. The Committee chairman, Sen. Tim Johnson (D-S.D.), will also retire this year, and his departure has raised questions about who will assume the chairmanship after the elections and how that person might shape the legislative agenda for financial institutions in 2015 and beyond.

Of course, who will assume the chairmanship depends on a variety of factors, including decisions made by the senators > in line for the job, and whether Democrats are able to maintain control of the Senate.

> The chairmanship of a senate committee is determined by seniority. When Johnson retires, Sen. Jack Reed (R.I.) is next in line to assume the chairman-

Upcoming NASCUS Directors' Colleges to be Held in Utah, Colo., Tenn., and Calif.

ASCUS Directors' Colleges have provided training to nearly 3,000 state credit union board members since 2008, allowing credit union directors, along with senior credit union staff, to hear firsthand about regulators' expectations of directors. The colleges also provide a venue for networking and sharing board experiences. Though the content of colleges is geared toward directors, anyone, including credit union management, is welcome to attend these important one-day educational events. All NASCUS' director colleges and schools have been approved for CPE credits.

NASCUS Directors' Colleges feature such sessions as Critical Compliance Issues, Basics of the Bank Secrecy Act, and Current Exam Issues for Directors. Registration is $199 per person for NASCUS mem-and providing for NCUA annual stress testing of those credit unions has been published.

Tax attorney Mark McWatters, the assistant dean for graduate programs and an adjunct professor at the Southern Methodist University Dedman School of Law, was confirmed by the Senate to serve on the three-person NCUA Board. He replaces Republican Michael Fryzel, whose term officially expired Aug. 2, 2013. Fryzel has been serving on the NCUA Board since July 2008.

Also of note is the passage by the House of several pieces of legislation providing regulatory relief for small community financial institutions: the Capital Access for Small Community Financial Institutions Act of 2013 (H.R. 3584), which would allow state-chartered, privately insured credit unions to join the Federal Home Loan Bank system; the Credit Union Share Fund Insurance Parity Act (H.R. 3468), which would provide the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund coverage for trust accounts: and the CFPB Rural Designation Petition and Correction Act (H.R. 2672), which focuses primarily on ensuring that community financial institutions can continue to be able to provide credit to consumers and small businesses, especially in rural and underserved areas.

NASCUS has filed a comment letter on the NCUA's proposed Risk-Based Capital Rule, addressing the need for the NCUA to include supplemental capital for non-low income consumer credit unions within its proposed risk-based regulatory framework.

We've also celebrated the California Department of Business Oversight's NASCUS reaccreditation and Massachusett Division of Banks' first joint accreditation by NASCUS, the Conference of State Bank Supervisors (CSBS) and the American Association of Residential Mortgage Regulators (AARMR), as well as the reaccreditation of the Alabama Credit Union Administration (ACUA), the Michigan Department of Insurance and Financial Services Office of Credit Unions (DIFS OCU) and the Washington Department of Financial Institutions (DFI) Division of Credit Unions.

In June, we announced the appointment of two individuals to the NASCUS Credit Union Advisory Council and to the NASCUS Board. Kim Santos, director of

oming on the heels of the numerous rules from the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and final rules from the NCUA on derivatives and stress testing, as well as proposed rules from the NCUA on federal fields of membership and home-based credit unions, is the NCUA's Risk-Based Capital Rule.

Proposed in January, this rule impacts all credit unions.

NASCUS, as an association of regulators with credit unions as advisors, often challenges NCUA on the appropriate scope of its authority as the federal insurer of state credit unions. NASCUS, in its May 28 comment letter, pushes back back on NCUA's authority to issue 1,250% risk-weights and Individual Minimum Capital Requirements for state-chartered credit unions without consultation and consent from the state regulator as provided in the proposed risk-based capital rule.

NASCUS recognizes that designing a risk-based system is a complicated undertaking and that it has been a contentious issue. NASCUS is not alone in its belief that the proposed rule is too broad. NASCUS' comment letter addresses the need for the NCUA to include supplemental capital for non-low income consumer credit unions within its proposed risk-based regulatory framework.

"NCUA's contention that it lacks the authority to include supplemental capital for the risk-based capital ratio is an unnecessarily narrow reading of the (Federal Credit Union Act)," writes NASCUS.

NASCUS believes that more consultation with state regulators would resolve many of the issues that the NCUA's proposed Risk-Based Capital Rule brings. Such dialogue could be especially helpful where the individual minimum capital requirement is concerned. Regulators are successful when they promulgate rules that are nimble enough to address problem credit unions without encumbering the entire industry.

NASCUS' comments focus on ensuring that the rule is right-sized for the credit union system, reflects the reasoned judgment of the actual risks, maintains predictable standards that support credit union growth and innovation, and cements the current statutory commitment by NCUA to consult and coordinate with state regulators.

By engaging with federal regulators to ease regulatory burden and protect the unique benefits of the state charter, NASCUS works diligently to serve statechartered credit unions and regulators.

the Office of Credit Unions (OCU) at the Wisconsin Department of Financial Institutions, was appointed to the NASCUS Board of Directors. Santos, who has been with the OCU for more than 20 years, has been active within NASCUS for a number of years, having served on many of the Association's committees and task forces.

Richard F. Stipa, chief executive officer of the Trevose, Pa.-headquartered TruMark Financial Credit Union, was appointed to the NASCUS Credit Union Advisory Council, and will represent District 1, which includes Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Rhode Island, Vermont, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan.

In addition to all of these exciting happenings, we are also rounding out the program of our State System Summit, which is scheduled for Sept. 10-12 at the Omni Hotel in Nashville, Tenn. Cyber security, interest rate risk and patent trolls are just a few of the topics that will be discussed during this year's Summit. Confirmed speakers for the Summit include Greg Gonzales, commissioner of the Tennessee Department of Financial Institutions Credit Union Division, Tennessee Credit Union League President and CEO Fred Robinson, and NCUA Chair Debbie Matz. to name a few. We hope you will register for this exciting opportunity to take part in educational workshops, insightful discussions and networking events geared specifically for CEOs, state regulators and industry leaders!

It's been a busy few months and things show no sign of slowing down. We look forward to your continued support as we work to advance the state credit union system!

NASCUS Presents for International Credit Union Regulators' Network and Defense Credit Union Council

Presentation for World Conference of Credit Unions Set for Late July

ASCUS has been dedicated to defending and advancing a strong state credit union system since it was established in 1965, but the organization is also well known worldwide for promoting the safety and soundness of state-chartered credit unions.

This year, NASCUS has given presentations around the globe, including for the International Credit Union Regulators' Network (ICURN) Annual Conference and for the Defense Credit Union Council (DCUC), with plans to present at the World Credit Union (WOCCU) Conference in late July.

The topics covered at the ICURN Annual Conference and at the DCUC Overseas Meeting, and those that will be covered at the WOCCU Conference later this month, range from the NASCUS Accreditation Program to regulatory burden.

NASCUS President and CEO Mary Martha Fortney discussed changes to the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund, riskbased pricing and the FDIC at the April 30 Defense Credit Union Council meeting.

The NASCUS Board of Directors and Credit Union Advisory Council met June 18 and 19 in Alexandria, Va. Pictured here are NASCUS Board Chairman Mike Wettrich and NASCUS Credit Union Advisory Council Chairman Cathie Tiernev.

NASCUS Board of Directors, Credit Union Advisory Council Meet in Alexandria

he NASCUS Board of Directors and Credit Union Advisory Council held meetings June 18 and 19 in Alexandria, Va., to discuss, among other things, the NASCUS Summit, scheduled for Sept. 10-12 at the Omni Hotel in Nashville, Tenn., and NASCUS public policies, and to share a regulatory update.

The regulatory update included NASCUS' Risk-Based Capital comment letter, which was filed May 28 with the NCUA. The development of a risk-based capital rule advocacy plan to improve any final NCUA rulemaking was discussed during the regulatory update. Advocacy would likely focus on one or two of the most problematic aspects of the proposed rule, such as the absence of coordination with state regulators, and the risk-weighting system and asset-size threshold.

Another topic of discussion was the Economic Growth and Regulatory Paperwork Reduction Act (EGRPRA), in which the NCUA has elected to participate. (NASCUS' Legislative & Regulatory Affairs Committee is working on a comment letter on EGRPRA, which will be submitted by the Sept. 2 deadline.)

NASCUS staff also discussed NCUA development of guidance on the key issues of Bank-Owned Life Insurance and split-dollar, interest rate risk and cyber security.

The next joint teleconference of the NASCUS Board and Advisory Council will be on July 22 at 1 p.m. Eastern Time.

Wisconsin Regulator Welcomed to NASCUS Board; Pennsylvania Credit Union Executive Named to NASCUS CU Advisory Council

im Santos, director of the Office of Credit Unions (OCU) at the Wisconsin Department of Financial Institutions. and Richard F. Stipa, chief executive officer of the Trevose, Pa.-headquartered TruMark Financial Credit Union, have been appointed to the NASCUS Board and to the NASCUS Credit Union Advisory Council, respectively.

Kim Santos

named the OCU's director, she served as their deputy director. She has been active within NASCUS for a number of years, having served on many of the Association's committee's and task forces.

Stipa, who is a director of the Pennsylvania Credit Union Association and a director of the Pennsylvania Credit Union Foundation, will represent District 1, which includes Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Rhode Island, Vermont, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan, was appointed to the Council by NASCUS Council Chairman Cathie Tierney, president and CEO of Community First Credit Union in Appleton, Wis.

Positive Resolution on Crucial UBIT Issues Announced by NASCUS

t was a turning point when Community First Credit Union, of Appleton, Wis., prevailed in a 2009 jury trial against the Internal Revenue Service on unrelated business income tax (UBIT) issues. and a federal court in Colorado ruled in favor of Bellco Credit Union, of Greenwood Village, Colo., on UBIT issues in federal court.

The UBIT Steering Committee, of which NASCUS is a member, had worked closely with both credit unions in support of the litigation. On April 9, after nearly 15 years of work on the issue by NASCUS and its coalition partners, it was announced that the IRS had issued a memorandum clearing nearly all credit union products at stake in the litigation from being subject to UBIT, opening the door for credit unions to receive refunds of past payments.

In addition to NASCUS, the UBIT Steering Committee includes the Credit Union National Association, CUNA Mutual Group, and the American Association of Credit Union Leagues.

While the IRS memo represents a significant step forward for the state system, more work remains to be done with respect to several outstanding UBIT issues. NASCUS will continue its work with its coalition partners until there is a fully satisfactory resolution on all UBIT issues.

McWatters to Serve on NCUA Board

ax attorney Mark McWatters, the assistant dean for graduate programs and an adjunct professor at the Southern Methodist University Dedman School of Law, was confirmed June 19 by the Senate to serve on the three-person NCUA Board.

McWatters was a member of the Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP) Congressional Oversight Panel in Washington from 2009 to 2011, and former counsel to Rep. Jeb Hensarling (R-Texas), now chairman of the House Financial Services Committee. He replaces Republican Michael Fryzel, whose term officially expired Aug. 2, 2013.

"Having served on the TARP Congressional Oversight Panel and advocating to ease the regulatory burden on financial institutions. Mr. McWatters has an understanding of policy, regulation, and the complicated nuances of balancing public policy," said NASCUS President and CEO Mary Martha Fortney. "He will be an excellent addition to the NCUA Board."

tee and is expected to opt for that post over the top spot on the Banking Committee. The current chair of the Armed Services Committee, Sen. Carl Levin (Mich.), will also retire at the end of this year.

If Reed passes on the chairmanship, it would fall to the third-ranked Democrat on the Committee—Sen. Charles Schumer of New York. Schumer's office has been tight-lipped regarding the senator's plans, although it's believed that he would be more interested in focusing on national leadership opportunities than in chairing the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, as doing so would put him in the politically difficult position of balancing demands from his home state constituency with overriding anti-Wall Street pressures in Washington. If he declines the chairmanship, the job will fall to fifth-in-line Sen. Sherrod Brown from Ohio. (The fourth most senior Democrat on the committee, Robert Menendez (N.J.), already heads the Foreign Relations Committee.)

Brown has indicated publicly that he would accept the chairmanship if given the opportunity. As one of the most liberal members of the Senate, Brown supported "too big to fail" initiatives, including legislation to place size and leverage limits on large banks and restore the Glass-Steagall Act. He also criticized the Department of Justice for failing to prosecute and imprison bank executives who may have committed financial crimes in the prelude and aftermath of the financial crisis. As such, large financial institutions are very concerned as to what his tenure as chair of the Banking Committee may bring.

Most credit unions may fare better under Brown's chairmanship than their larger Wall Street counterparts, however, since the senator has supported efforts to reduce regulatory burden and support lending in small community financial institutions. The senator is also familiar with credit union issues, as there are approximately 150 state-chartered credit unions in the state of Ohio. NASCUS has worked with Brown's office on his bill to provide access to Federal Home Loan Bank membership for privately-insured credit unions (S. 1806), and the senator also cosponsored a bill that would amend the Federal Credit Union Act to allow the NCUA Board to approve member-business lending up to 27.5% of the credit union's total assets (S. 968).

But the prospect of Brown's chairmanship may be attracting Wall Street funding for Republican challengers and hurting his Democratic colleagues who are facing tight races, including fellow Banking Committee member Sen. Kay Hagan, who is fighting to keep her seat in North Carolina. Right now, Democrats control the Senate with 53 seats to Republicans' 45, but there are at least 12 competitive Senate races that threaten to tip that balance in the Republicans' favor. If Democrats were to lose control of the Senate, Sen. Richard the Senate or not, Sen. Johnson's retire-Shelby (R-Ala.) is the likely replacement. His views are known, having already lead the Committee from 2003-2006, and a centrist Republican who will most likely

Whether the Democrats retain control of ment ensures major changes to policy priorities atop the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee following the November elections.

California, Michigan, Alabama and Washington Earn NASCUS Reaccreditation

Massachusetts Division of Banks Receives First Joint Bank, Credit Union, and Mortgage Accreditation

ASCUS accreditation and reaccreditation are significant achievements, representing the effectiveness and sound supervision of the state credit union regulatory system. NASCUS accreditation is valid for a five-year period subject to annual review. The annual review process enables accredited agencies and the NASCUS Performance Standards Committee (PSC) to measure progress and improvement.

To earn accreditation, an agency's qualifications are evaluated by an Accreditation Review Team (ART), who completes a thorough examination of the agency's accreditation application and supporting documents, followed by three days of intense on-site scrutiny of agency programs and performance.

NASCUS recently approved the reaccreditation of the California Department of Business Oversight (DBO) and the Massachusetts Division of Banks (MDB).

The MDB received certificates of accreditation not only from NASCUS but from the Conference of State Bank Supervisors (CSBS) and the American Association of Residential Mortgage Regulators (AARMR). Massachusetts is the first state to achieve accreditation in all three programs as part of a joint pilot program among NASCUS, CSBS and AARMR. The pilot program aims to help states gain multiple accreditations at one time.

nance companies, debt collectors, money service businesses, and mortgage loan originators, is led by David Cotney, who was appointed as Massachusetts Commissioner of Banks in November 2010. Massachusetts was first accredited by NASCUS in 1996. The Division's initial mortgage accreditation—the first awarded as part of the AARMR/CSBS Mortgage Accreditation Program—occurred in 2008. This is Massachusetts' fifth bank accreditation, with the first accreditation occurring in 1994.

The DBO, led by Commissioner Jan Lynn Owen and Deputy Commissioner of Credit Unions Erick Orellana, supervises 146 credit unions with combined assets of approximately $79.3 billion. The DBO was formed on July 1, 2013, through the consolidation of the former Department of Financial Institutions and the former Department of Corporations.

In addition to the MDB and DBO, NASCUS recently approved the reaccreditation the Alabama Credit Union Administration (ACUA), the Michigan Department of Insurance and Financial Services Office of Credit Unions (DIFS OCU) and the Washington Department of Financial Institutions (DFI) Division of Credit Unions.

The Michigan DIFS OCU was the first state to earn NASCUS' accreditation in 1989.

Led by Director John Kolhoff, the agency supervises 187 credit unions with combined assets of approximately $35 billion.

Alabama and Washington were the fourth and fifth regulatory agencies to be reaccredited by NASCUS this year, following the reaccreditation of California, Massachusetts and Michigan.

The ACUA, which is led by Sarah H. Moore, supervises 65 credit unions with combined assets of approximately $10.7 billion, while the DFI, led by Scott Jarvis, supervises 62 credit unions with combined assets of approximately $35.9 billion. NASCUS Board member and previous chair Linda Jekel is director of the DFI Division of Credit Unions.

"NASCUS reaccreditation is a significant achievement and represents the effectiveness and sound supervision of the state credit union regulatory system," said NASCUS President and CEO Mary Martha Fortney. "We offer congratulations to these agencies for their ongoing commitment to supervisory excellence."
